

Under EU Directive 2009/136/EU, we would like to inform you that our website accepts the use of "cookies" in order to identify how users have reached our website and to observe recurring generic usage patterns, once the user enters our site. Cookies are messages that the web server transmits to your web browser when you visit web pages. Your browser stores every message in a small file that provides us with information about your last visit to our site. This information is collected and analyzed in order to improve the functionality, content, and overall appearance of our site. You can always, by changing your computer settings, choose not to accept cookies.